

The fitful firelight fills the room. And, flaring up from ashy bed, Dispels the ever pressing gloom, I sit with Sally and, by jing, I yearn for her like everything!

I sit with Sally by the grate And scourge affection's craven fear.

Alas! Each time I start to speak. The firelight flames with sudden cheer-My heart is brave when is the gloom, But faints when firelight floods the room!

Which I might bridge with one caress, And just across the border line Is Heaven, should she answer yes! Once more I never myself-and then That taunting irrelight gleams again!

The fragrance of her dainty frock— How earnestly I long to kick. The tick-tocks from that speeding clock! But now the firelight reddens deep— The coals are snuggling down to sleep!

And as we sit beside the grate, The shadows creep about our feet. No more the flames dart up to 'fright My lips from seeking hers so sweet-Her head upon my joyous breast!

Dissatisfaction.

This is a queer old world. In the suburb where I live, there is a new family about to move into a home over which they are greatly delighted. They are enamored of the town and the people and are anticipating great pleasure in their new surroundings. Just a few blocks away lives another family in a beautiful house which is for sale. The members of this home, are thoroughly dissatisfied. They don't like the house, the people or the climate. In fact, they are almost praying for a buyer. The situation reminds me of the soldier in Cuba who so longed for New York that he was balf a mind to try swimming home. A raw recruit, overhearing him, re-

"I'm glad you like it. As for me, if I were in New York I would try float boil the beans, corn and carrots, chop ing here on a Saginaw shingle-for I can't swim a stroke."

Question of Support.

A jeweler's advertisement in a Michigan newspaper says: "Not many young ladies are able to support such a gold watch as we are offering." The young men of the town should beware! A young woman who cannot ity would be a mighty poor provider for a husband.

Fits.

First Editor-"I see a man gave a woman his seat in a street car-and immediately had a fit!" Second Editor-"That must have been in New York city." First Editor-"Why?"

Second Editor-"If it had been in Chicago the man, the woman and the passengers would have had the fit!"

A Texas girl recently sent this extraordinary request to the editor of her church paper:

on a man's lap even if she is engaged? The editor answered her question thus: "If it were our girl and our lap, yes; if it were another fellow's girl and our lap, yes? but if it were our girl and another fellow's lap, never!"

Mixing His Words.

The editor of the Farmington (Ia.) News has joined the temperance brigade, and tells why in the following: The News last Friday, innocently accredited the Christian Endeavor with playing cards at the M. H. Morse home, when nothing of the kind was intended. For two and a half days last week we had a new printer, but "booze" got the best of him and now he is gone. The printer mentioned, set the society item in question and caused the word "candy words at the end of the item.

Maybe He Wore Bib-Overalls.

A hobo, detained in Missouri, has seriously confused the physiologies by placing the organ of emotion in a somewhat basic or frontal position relative to the anatomy of man. The Springfield Leader says:

A Springfield policeman who apprecites the pathetic notwithstanding his proterday and was going to run him in. The "bo" had shipped on board a couple of big ones and was beginning to think well of himself. He looked reproachfully at the officer and said:

"My trousers may be ragged, but they cover a warm heart!"

An Imminent Danger. The Kewanee (III.) Star is moved to remark that no one knows where lightning and post-cards will strike next. Says the Star: A few weeks ago, a man over in Iowa was lying on his deathbed when he received the following cheerful message on a card: "Cheer up old man the worst is yet to come." But this was not all, for the day he died his wife received the following on another eard. "Many happy returns this day."
